A Beautiful Tribute to Mrs. Gary Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock the Daughters of the Confederacy met at the home of Mrs. R. G. Blake for the purpose of commemorating the birth and life of Mrs. Fannie R. Gary. Mrs. E. L. Carney presided. The following program was rendered:

Lord's Prayer in concert.
 Hymn, Sweet Bye and Bye.
 Scripture lesson and prayer by Rev. J. R. Herndon.

Eulogy by Mrs. R. G. Todd.
 Solo, Ave Maria—Miss Irma Blake.
 Address by Rev. Bunyan Stephens.
 Hymn, How Firm a Foundation.
 Benediction.

These services in honor of one of Ocala's noblest women was a beautiful tribute to one who gave her life for the good of others. Mrs. Todd, in her paper, mentioned a number of interesting incidents and characteristic features of the life and work of Mrs. Gary. The subject of the character sketch is altogether a worthy one. The subject matter of Mrs. Todd's sketch was to the point and deserves the highest commendation.

Mr. Stephens called attention to the fact that the people are meeting often to celebrate the anniversaries of the great men and women of the past. Then he mentioned some facts in reference to greatness, namely: "In God's thought the greatness of mind and spirit rise to an immeasurable height above that of any material body; true greatness is inherent; it is not inherited; it is not dependent on position, possessions or patronage—true greatness consists in being right and doing right."

Mr. Herndon read for the scripture lesson that beautiful and impressive incident in the fourteenth chapter of Mark which relates the story of the woman breaking the alabaster box of ointment, and pouring it on the head of Jesus. The account records the complaint made by Judas and the words of commendation from Jesus, closing with the words: "Whosoever the gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, that also which this woman hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her."

In closing his remarks Mr. Stephens quoted the following poem by Chas. S. Ross;

"I love old mothers—mothers with white hair,
 And kindly eyes, and lips grown softly sweet
 With murmuring blessings over sleeping babes.

"There is a something in their quiet graces
 That speaks the calm of Sabbath afternoons;
 A knowledge in their deep, unfaltering eyes
 That far out-reaches all philosophy.

"Time, with caressing touch,
 About them weaves
 The silver-threaded fairy-shawl of age,
 While all the echoes of forgotten songs
 Seem joined to lend a sweetness to their speech.

"Old mothers!—as they pass with slow-time step,
 Their trembling hands cling gently to youth's strength.
 Sweet mothers!—as they pass, one sees again
 Old garden walks, old roses, and old loves."

So closed the third anniversary service in honor of Mrs. Fannie R. Gary one of the noblest and best of Ocala's mothers.

Junior League Social

The Junior Epworth League, of the Methodist church, will hold a social Saturday afternoon at the parsonage, at 3 o'clock. There will be an election of officers and a literary program will be rendered. All leaguers are expected to be present.

A silver tea for the benefit of the proposed city park will be given at the home of Mrs. Harvey Clark on Fort King avenue, Friday, September 29. The hours will be from 4 o'clock in the afternoon to 10 o'clock in the evening. The park is being promoted by the Woman's Club, and the club asks the assistance of the public. Work on the park will be started next month, under the direction of Mr. Harold B. Swope, landscape architect.

Council last night received an invitation from the park committee of the Woman's Club to attend the silver tea to be given at the home of Mrs. Harvey Clark, on Fort King avenue, Friday afternoon and evening, for the benefit of the proposed city park on the Taylor pond property.

Miss Mary Gates, who has been so successful in teaching children in the primary lessons, will open her school for children again on next Monday in the Baracca class room of the Baptist church. She anticipates having a most successful year.

Mrs. Sylvan McElroy and her bright little son, Sylvan Jr., after a pleasant visit to Mrs. McElroy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Dozier, left yesterday for their home in Orlando. Dr. McElroy came after them in his car.

Mrs. J. H. Pegram and baby who have been in Orlando, visiting Mrs. Pegram's mother for several weeks will return to Ocala the last of the week.

Dr. and Mrs. H. C. Dozier will leave tomorrow for Philadelphia, where the

MOVING PICTURE FEATURES

Manager Bennett announces that, beginning with October 11, he will each Wednesday show a Mary Pickford or a Marguerite Clark Paramount feature. Mary Pickford will be seen on October 11 in "Such a Little Queen," and the pictures following will be a Clark in "Gretna Green", Clark in "When We Were Twenty-One"; Clark in "Wildflower"; Pickford in "Mistress Nell"; Pickford in "Little Pal"; Pickford in "Cinderella"; Pickford in "Rags"; and others later, including Pickford in "Hulda from Holland", and Clark in "Silks and Satans."

At the Temple today three comedies a drama and a Hearst news pictorial will be shown.

Tomorrow Pauline Frederick appears here again in a Famous Players' production called "Ashes of Embers," in which she accomplishes the difficult task of playing two roles at the same time, two sisters, Agnes and Laura, one a drudge and the other a totally heartless and selfish woman. The story has to do with a pitilessly selfish girl who is relentless in her demands for money despite the fact that her own sister, who is the family drudge, scarcely has enough to keep body and soul together. Laura finally steals money from the cash drawer over which her sister Agnes presides in a department store in order to get a dress with which to dazzle a millionaire. Agnes goes to jail, but Laura wins the millionaire, who soon wakes up to the fact that he is being used merely as a private purse by his wife, who has promptly transferred her affections to a young architect, from whom she had temporarily disentangled herself in order to ensnare the millionaire. Dramatic complications follow, including action for divorce.

as second divisional officer without a rumor would be different. His battle station, as he had said to Starnes, would be to command No. 2 turret—the great turret, housing three fourteen-inch guns—just forward of the bridge and the conning tower. A lieutenant of full rank, with a lieutenant of junior grade, like Wendell, or with an ensign as second in command, belonged at such a battle station. Wendell had realized, therefore, that his order to report for duty as watch and divisional officer was proof of lack of officers, but he was used to that fact. Often enough, in battle practice, he had been senior divisional officer in command of a turret. But if Varney's loss meant that he was to have no junior in the turret who had been trained at the big guns the weakness in battle might be serious indeed.

Wendell, finishing dressing, hurried to the captain's room, where, formally reporting himself for duty, he was ordered to Mr. Stacey, the executive officer, for assignment to his division.

Cries and commotion came from about the ship, and as Bob turned from the executive officer to inspect No. 2 turret, which he was to command in action, the Arizona left the navy yard. He went out the quarter deck as the battleship headed to Hampton Roads and increased speed as it steered into the wide water. A number of the ships which had been in the roads when he had crossed from Newport News in the launch now were in the bay and headed out to sea. Two light cruisers, a half dozen destroyers and the great dreadnaught Pennsylvania were in motion. The yellow haze of powder smoke, puffing from the Pennsylvania's forward turrets and blown swiftly back by the breeze, told that it was the battleship which was firing, and now a spurt of spray, dashing up a hundred yards ahead of the Pennsylvania and half as high as her foremast, told that somewhere out at sea a ship of the enemy was returning the fire. The Arizona steamed more swiftly after her sister ship, and now as the vessel rose and fell to the swell rolling in from the Atlantic the alarm bells boomed below and the bugles called all men to battle stations.

The upper works of three vessels—the masts and fire control tops and funnels of a first line dreadnaught or battle cruiser, the masts and tops and funnels of two other large war vessels—showed above the horizon to the east. Twenty-two thousand yards, or more than twelve miles, was the estimate of the distance as Bob Wendell was standing on the quarter deck with other gunnery officers ready for battle before the bugles called them to their battle stations.

The hulls of the enemy's ships were then entirely invisible, and the officers on the quarter deck of the Arizona could see nothing at all of any hostile vessels except the three. Only Starnes and the other men in the Arizona's tops—a hundred and twenty feet higher—could make out the hulls of the larger vessels of the enemy and could see, besides, that they were accompanied by smaller craft. Yet the Pennsylvania, now barely 2,000 yards ahead of the Arizona, already was engaged. Great geysers of spray spurted up ahead the Pennsylvania where the enemy's shells were striking in the water, and a gun in the forward turret of the American dreadnaught was making reply.

"The leading ship of the enemy's line is an armored cruiser of the Pera class," the information came down from the tops. A Pera cruiser meant, as every one knew, a ship of thirty knots speed and four eleven-inch guns, fourteen of seven inch. "No. 2 is a battle cruiser of the Carthage class." "That meant eight thirteen-inch guns in an armored vessel of twenty-eight knots. "No. 3 is another Pera. They are attended by eleven destroyers now in sight. The Pennsylvania is testing the range of the rear ship, and that vessel and the Carthage are replying."
